Commercial Flood Damage Cleanup and Restoration

No matter how frequently and thoroughly you inspect your facilities, there are still numerous ways that water can flood your business. Heavy rains, internal broken pipes, public sewer backups, water heater leaks, toilet backups, fire extinguishing, and other events can cause extensive flooding in a commercial building. Such disasters can cause water damage, mold, interruption of operations, communications outages, revenue losses, and other serious consequences for a company.

Utah Flood Cleanup provides our commercial customers with a reliably quick response to flooding or other emergencies. We will communicate on your behalf to obtain all necessary approvals from your insurance company for the work to be done.

Basement Flooding Due to Rain

Even if you maintain your company's plumbing system ideally and you've located your building(s) well away from flood risk zones, any of the various causes listed above may result in major flooding in your basement or main floor that can still affect your business at some point.

Even rain may be the indirect cause of problems that impact your facilities, despite your diligence in avoiding such catastrophes. If your basement or ground floor becomes flooded, you must be able to rely on emergency response to extract water or raw sewage and begin thorough industrial drying.
