Water Damage Restoration in Woods Cross, Utah

Working with a reputable water damage restoration company is key to ensuring a loss is properly handled and managed. Good firms abide by the IICRC S500 Standard for Professional Water Damage Restoration and classify losses by three categories of water damage. There's Category 1 water, which consists of a clean water loss. Category 2 losses are defined as water that may have some contamination. Category 3 losses are the most hazardous type of situation, which may consist of raw sewage or bacteria-harboring black water. A professional restoration water damage company properly identifies a loss and then works to extract water, remove porous materials, restore non-porous materials and contents, and then properly dry out the property with the latest equipment and tools purpose-built for such tasks.

Mold Damage Restoration in Woods Cross, Utah

In the right conditions, mold can begin to grow within 48 hours - and mold isn't just unsightly and a risk to a property's structural integrity: It's also hazardous to occupant health. Elongated exposure is linked to many health symptoms for those with mold sensitivities, including the likes of watering eyes, skin irritation, scratchy throat, nasal congestion, and more. In more severe cases, it may also lead to respiratory issues, memory issues, and anxiety. Whether your property has experienced a water loss or mold is growing under the sink from a leaking water pipe, it's important to have the issue resolved quickly to avoid more significant and more expensive long-term problems. Our professionals follow the IICRC S520 industry standard for Mold Remediation.

Fire Damage Restoration in Woods Cross, Utah

According to data from the National Fire Protection Association, residential fires are responsible for a total of nearly $7 billion in property damage each year. And these invasive home disasters require a lot of work to return properties to pre-loss condition. Aside from the damage to the structure caused by the fire itself, there's also often smoke damage and ash cleanup required. In some cases, a fire may have disrupted asbestos or lead-containing materials, thereby requiring abatement services. As qualified professionals in fire damage restoration, we'll carefully assess the situation and create a roadmap toward getting your home restored to pre-loss condition.
