Water Damage Repair Process

Water cleanup and damage restoration is a multi-process operation. All steps must be performed in the proper order and in accordance with water damage restoration industry best practices for the highest quality outcome. Errors or poor execution of any parts of the process can lead to health and safety problems and loss of property value.

The complexity of the overall water cleanup and restoration of a home depends on the size, design, and contents of the home and the nature and extent of the damage. But, for all residential or commercial water disasters of any scope, the professional cleanup, repair, and restoration process generally involve these several steps:

Water Extraction

Structural Drying

Water Damage Repairs

Water Damage Restoration

All excess water is removed from your property. This is usually done by use of a submersible water pump and/or commercial wet/dry vacuum unit(s). Most of the water volume is removable using one or a combination of these extraction methods.

After the excess water has been removed, surfaces might look dry, but on closer examination, it becomes clear that insulation in walls, structural building supports, furniture items, and other major components of your home are not thoroughly dry. Collectively, a large amount of water can remain in your home. Strong air circulation is the only effective method for drying out a saturated house and its contents. We use a combination of high-velocity commercial equipment, including fans, blowers, and dehumidifiers to ensure thorough drying.

Every water-damaged item is removed from the affected area and taken to a safe location for repair. Many items require commercial cleaning and often disinfecting. In sewage flooded home, decisions may need to be made about which items can be salvaged and which must be thrown away.

This part of the process involves attending to fine details as necessary to restore your home to its condition prior to the water damage. Particular requirements for this phase of the restoral process vary, of course, based on the size, design, and contents of your home and the nature and extent of the water damage.

Avoid Water-Related Damage with Immediate Flood Damage Restoration Services

The number one concern with water damage is the potential for mold growth. The best way to stop mold from spreading is to address the problem as soon as possible. Mold is a health hazard and needs to be dealt with right away.

By taking care of water damage you potentially keep your replacements costs down for furniture and other household items. Utah Flood Cleanup takes care of any water damage repair Salt Lake residents need and gives your home the best chance at a full recovery. The sooner we begin repairs, the sooner you can reenter your home or property.

Factors such as harsh weather can indirectly cause water damage by causing pipes to burst and weakening plumbing lines. When a water pipe bursts, it will leak until the water is turned off. If a pipe breaks when you are not home, severe water damage may incur. Waste spillage from an overflowing toilet may also require damage repair services.

Frequently Asked Questions About Water Damage Repair in Salt Lake City

What should I do if I've had water damage in my home due to a burst pipe or natural disaster?

---

If you've just discovered water in your home from a burst pipe or natural disaster, the first thing you should do is turn off your power breakers to eliminate the chance of electrical shock. The second thing you should do is turn off your main water line, especially if you suspect a burst pipe. If it's safe to do so, rescue your personal items from the affected area and take them outside to dry. You can remove standing water, but be careful and go slowly. As soon as possible, file a claim with your insurance company. Then give us a call at \(801\) 416-2666
