What Does Wildfires Restoration Look Like For Me?

Wildfires restoration differs depending on the type of property, severity of the damage and the time that passes before wildfires damage restoration begins. Utah Flood Cleanup sends an experienced team to assess the property damage, prevent further damage, decontaminate the property and restore the contents to its pre-fire state.

Wildfire Debris Cleanup and Recovery

The first 48 hours following a wildfire provide a golden opportunity to recover your property. The acidic soot and smoke damage accelerate the deterioration of building components. Further, dry chemicals and water used to put out the fire leave behind toxic smoke and odor. This must be neutralized as quickly as possible.

When our experienced technicians arrive on the scene, they investigate the damage to your home or business. Then, our team comes up with a plan to salvage what we can from the property. You and your family or employees can remain at a safe distance while we take care of the wildfires damage restoration.

The next step is securing the property. We cover the windows and roof and board up the structure to prevent unauthorized entry and damage due to the elements. Then, we concentrate on drying materials and removing excess water to prevent mold from forming. This is a critical step in effective wildfires damage restoration.

As the final stage in our wildfire debris cleanup and recovery service, we completely remove soot and smoke damage and sanitize the entire property.
